Free Webcasts Available to Local Government Officials

The International City/County Management Association (ICMA) will host a series of three interactive webcasts this spring to provide local government officials with free, high-quality training opportunities with no travel required. A webcast combines telephone and Internet technology to offer local government managers and their staffs a chance to gain relevant, useful information on key issues of concern to today's cities and counties. Current topics include urban forestry and active living.

Seeing Green with Trees: The Economic and Environmental Benefits of Urban Forests

Tuesday, May 18, 2004, 2 p.m. EDT

This 90-minute webcast will demonstrate how local governments have used trees to meet environmental regulatory requirements, save money, and improve community quality of life. Local government case studies that have met the challenges of reducing air pollution, minimizing stormwater runoff, and improving water quality with urban forests will be highlighted.

Health and Community Design: The Local Government Role in Promoting Active Living

Wednesday, June 9, 2004, 2 p.m. EDT

This 90-minute webcast will focus on the ways in which community design can improve health by enabling active living, a way of life that integrates physical activity into daily routines. Local government policies and programs that foster walkable, bikeable, and activity-friendly environments, highlighting best practices from communities nationwide, will be covered

Registration: Each webcast is free for the first 100 registrants, after which registration will be $95 per site. To register for a webcast, visit <http://www.lgean.org/html/webcast> or contact Andrew Seth at ICMA, 202/962-3622 or aseth@icma.org for more information.
